PROGRAMME DESCRIPTION

The Post Graduate Diploma in Wound Care Management program at Lincoln University College aims to prepare healthcare practitioners to effectively handle complex wound healing management. The goal is to equip experienced, committed healthcare professionals with the required knowledge and abilities in wound healing and tissue restoration so that patients receive the best possible treatment. The curriculum is aimed to help health professionals improve their knowledge and skills in caring for patients with complex wounds, which is becoming more common. Students will learn specialized skills that will allow them to develop, implement, and evaluate wound care management programs.

PROGRAMME AIM

Graduates of the Post Graduate Diploma in Wound Care Management will gain a solid understanding of the pathophysiology of various wounds and appropriate care methods. They will learn to use different wound care products, manage risks, and provide effective patient care. This program aims to produce specialists and managers who are:

Knowledgeable and skilled in critical thinking, problem-solving, and addressing wound care issues using strong cognitive abilities.
Effective communicators, able to work methodically and responsibly within a healthcare team.
Competent leaders, with research and numerical skills relevant to wound care.
Entrepreneurial and socially responsible, with the ability to identify business opportunities and apply management and ethical values to support professional and social development in the wound care field.
